Living Ladies Of The White House.

Mrs. Grover Cleveland.

Mrs. Julia Gardiner Tyler, widow of President Tyler.

Mrs. James K. Polk, widow of President Polk.

Mrs. Rutherford B. Hayes, wife of ex-President Hayes, who was there four years.

Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland, who had the place for fifteen months.

Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, President Grant's widow, who lived eight years in the White House.

Mrs. James A. Garfield, widow of President Garfield, who lived only six months in the Executive Mansion.

Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson, the niece of President Buchanan, who was four years the mistress of the Executive Mansion.

Mrs. Ellen Arthur McElroy, the late President Arthur's sister, who was the lady of the White House during several months of each of the three years while he was president.

Mrs. Patterson, the daughter of President Johnson, who, the wife of the latter being old and not in very good health, jointly with her sister, Mrs. Stoer, now dead, did the honors of the White House while their father was president.

Mrs. Semple, step-daughter of Mrs. Tyler, and now an inmate of the Louise Home, in Washington City, who, during the period between her own mother's death, about September, 1842, and the marriage of her father in 1844, was the head of his household in the president's mansion a longer period than her step-mother held that place, who was married in June, 1844, and left the White House with her husband when his term expired, in March, 1845.

A Wonderful Conversion.

Dr. Butler, in his "Land of the Veda," relates the conversion of the first royal personage in India, that of young Duleep Singh. After the death of his father he was placed under British control, and was educated by the government. A young Brahmin who was receiving instructions at the mission became Duleep Singh's constant companion. The Brahmin, unknown to the priests, read the Bible each day, and it was not long before the young king shared his secret, and through his instrumentality was led to Christ. The Brahmin, though not a Christian, was the means of saving a soul through the instrumentality of the word of God. Dr. Butler writes: "Up to the present time he has fulfilled his vows and honored his Christian profession. Immediately after his baptism he established relief societies at Futtyghur and Lahore, placing them under the control of the American missions at both places. He established, and still sustains, a number of village schools for the education of the people, and has been a liberal contributor to every good object brought to his notice. He aided the cause of Christ to probably fully one-tenth of his whole income annually.

Prophylactic in Sickness.

"Typhoid Fever has broken out here again, but wherever Darbys Prophylactic Fluid has been freely used there has been no fever."—M. B. Lancaster, P. M., Ed. Central Alabamian.

"The Fluid is not merely a deodorizer, but a disinfectant—a destroyer of the disease germs in an atmosphere which cannot be breathed without danger."—New York Evening Post.

The Famous Daylight Tour.

To the average American tourist abroad, one of the places most eagerly sought and most thoroughly admired for the beauty and picturesqeness of its scenery, is the "Trosachs," the trip through which is one of constant delight and surprise.

The Trosachs, or "Bristled Territory," as the Gaelic derivation of the word would signify, though formerly impassable, now forms the entrance to one of the chief passes of the Grampian Hills. In the Trosachs it was, that the scene of Scott's favorite, and one of his greatest poetical works, "Lady of the Lake," was laid. A brief outline of the trip through the Tiosachs would not be out of place in this connection. The tourist starts from Callander on the Caledonian Railway; takes the stage along the shore of Lochs Vernacher and Achray to the shore of Loch Katrine; by boat through the loch to Stronachler; by stage through the mountains to Inversnaid on the shore of Loch Lomond; thence by boat through the loch to the railway station at Balloch. The trip is one which can easily be made by daylight.

Although the fact may not be generally known, it is nevertheless true that in this country, almost at the very door of New York City, there lies scenery which for beauty, picturesqueness and grandeur cannot be surpassed by that of any land or clime.

The scenery referred to is to be found along the banks of the romantic Hudson, in the Schunemunk and Warwick valleys, over Greenwood Lake, familiarly known as the "Loch Katrine" of America, and thence through the wild and charming valleys of the Wanaque and Pequannock. Because of its similarity to the Trosachs, of which mention was made at the beginning of this article, the country embraced in the above trip has been aptly styled the "American Trosachs."

The river, lake and mountain country through which the excursionist passes in a jaunt through the American Trosachs, while unequaled for its beauty, has not been as familiar to the public in the past as it should have been, but now, thanks to the enterprise of the Erie Railway, the trip is so arranged that it can be easily taken in a day's time. If made from New York the tour, like that through the Scottish Trosachs, may be made in eleven hours. When made in the opposite direction about double that time is necessary, as a stop-over during the night is made at Greenwood Lake.

Leaving New York at nine o'clock in the morning, the tourist takes one of the elegant day-line steamers which traverse the historic waters of the Hudson, and until 12:25 o'clock he is given opportunity to view the many points of interest along its banks; points which recall memories of "ye olden times" and places, which to the heart of every true American are inseparably connected with the memory of his patriot sires and the "Father of his Country."—George Washington.

On the left bank of the Hudson may be seen the following points of interest: Fort Lee; Indian Head; Piermont; Ramapo range of mountains; Hook Mountain; Haverstraw; Treason Hill; Arnold and Andre's meeting point; Stony Point, stormed by "Mad Anthony;" Forts Montgomery and Clinton; West Point U. S. Military School; Old Fort Putnam; Kosciusko's Monument; Old Cro' Nest; Butter Hill or Storm King; Cornwall; Idlewild; Old Hasbrouck Mansion, Washington's Headquarters in 1782-3. Right Bank: Jeffries Hook and Westchester Heights, sites of old forts; Riverside, tomb of Grant; Irvington; Sunnyside, home of Washington Irving; Sing Sing, location of State Prison; Teller's Point, off which the "Vulture" anchored when Arnold met Andre; King's Ferry; Manitou and Dunderberg Mountains; Anthony's Nose; Sugar Loaf Mountain; Garrisons; Constitution Island; the Two Brothers' Rocks; Mount Taurus; Little Stony Point; Breakneck Mountain; South and North Beacon; Fishkill mountains in distance. [Other points of interest not enumerated are to be seen on either side during this trip.]

At Newsburg the sightseer leaves the boat and is given an opportunity to gaze upon the historic places to be found in this city which was founded in 1708. Washington's headquarters—the old Hasbrouck mansion—where it was that the General matured the plans which brought final triumph to the American arms, attracts every eye. The building, which is unaltered in appearance, is filled with rarest relics of Revolutionary days. After leaving Newburg, a short ride by rail brings the tourist to New Windsor, which is the center of a historic region. Proceeding on his journey, various other points of interest are pointed out to him by the guide in charge, until after a short hour's ride Warwick is reached. Here the railway is abandoned, and the roomy stage coach is patronized. After a most enjoyable ride through a beautiful country, Greenwood Lake—the American "Loch Katrine"—comes into view. Words are too limited in their power of expression to attempt to convey to the reader the wils beauty of the scene; it must be witnessed in person to be appreciated. A ride over this charming lake in a steamer, and we reach the railway station at State line, where we board the train for home, passing on our way to Jersey City down the picturesque valleys of the Wanaque and Pequannock.

Temperance Notes.

Eighteen thousand dollars is an enormous price to pay for a small peach-blow vase, that's a fact; but look at the man who squanders thirty thousand dollars on the flowing bowl, and all he has to show for it a peach-blow nose, not one fourth the size of the vase afore-said!—Norristown Herald.

The saloons of Ohio will never pay enough taxes to defray the expenses incurred by the state on their account. As a simple business transaction, a special liquor-tax is a failure. If the saloons pay a million dollars in taxes, and it costs two millions to punish the crimes they cause and to support the public institutions which they necessitate, we lose a million by them. Why not put the curse away from us?—Western Christian Advocate.
